Sarah,

We have another week here and then home to Iowa City after Christmas. We've seen some great art (a spectacular Rembrandt exhibit at the National Galleries), some mixed theater, had some great walks, and have been out with friends for dinners and parties. It's been fun, and a good getaway for a month.

I'm sending you a review of our book that was written by Ron Ehrenberg of Cornell University in the Journal of Economic Literature. I sent a copy to Barb as well. Andy and I are writing an abbreviated (critical) comparison of CAM and RCM for AACSB, and Ron raises some issues about RCM in his review. We will take his criticisms into consideration. I'm also working with Sam Burer on a technical paper relating to the development of efficient cross subsidies in public higher education. I'm enjoying working with Sam immensely, although we have quite different approaches to doing research. He has to come around to my way of thinking because I'm technically incapable of adopting his.

Carol and I hope that you and Jeffrey have a great holiday season. I want to tell how impressed we are with the way Jeffrey relates to everyone at college and university events. He is very good at it, and his behavior is not at all typical.

Warmest regards,

Gary
